Experiencing or witnessing a hate crime can be very frightening. Here is a guide on how to report a hate crime in event that you are a victim of a hate crime or are a witness.

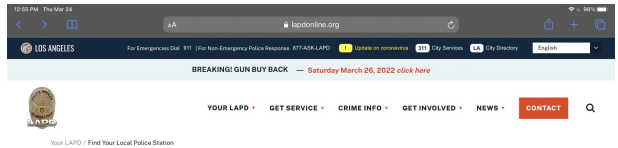

If you see someone being attacked, call 9-1-1 immediately for first responders to come assist the situation.

If you are not in a situation to call 9-1-1, either because you are the victim or you are not in the position or do not have the means to call 9-1-1 at the time, take the following steps afterwards:

Step 1: call the local police station's hate crimes coordinator

Using your results from the last page, locate the station's name on this list.

5

Call the corresponding phone number to the station.

When filing a report, even in-person, get the responding officer's name and badge number.

Ask for your own copy of the report.

Make sure "hate/bias-motivation" or "hate crime/incident" are checked off if they are options.

Step 2: contact the FBI

Hate crimes are violations of federal law. They are not just meant to attack one individual, but to intimidate the entire community. The FBI encourages hate crimes be reported to them.

They offer 3 ways to submit a tip to the FBI:

1. Fill out a form at tips.fbi.gov
2. Call 1-800-225-5324
3. Contact your local field office

1. The online form (tips.fbi.gov) allows you to stay anonymous, but please keep this note from the FBI in mind:

The FBI requests this information to assist in further investigating your tip. You do not have to provide your name or other personal information; however, failure to provide the requested information may impede or preclude law enforcement agencies from investigating your tip. Any information you provide about yourself or others may be used for authorized purposes.

2. Calling 1-800-CALL-FBI is also an option to remain anonymous.

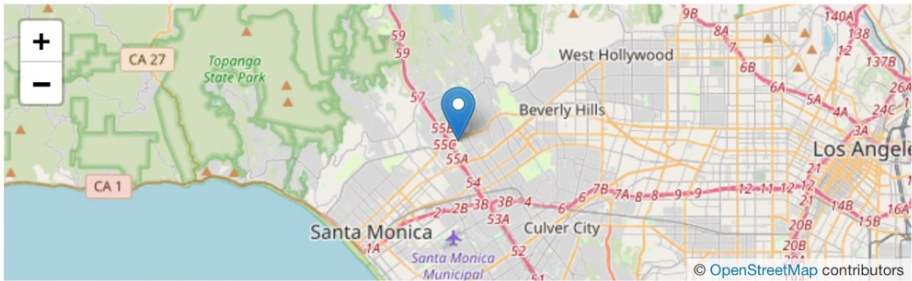

However, it is not recommended as much as contacting the local field office.

3. Contact your local field office.

For us, that is the Los Angeles field office.
